Brian Boru Harp

The Brian Boru harp is the oldest surviving Irish harp and is the model for the insignia of Ireland.

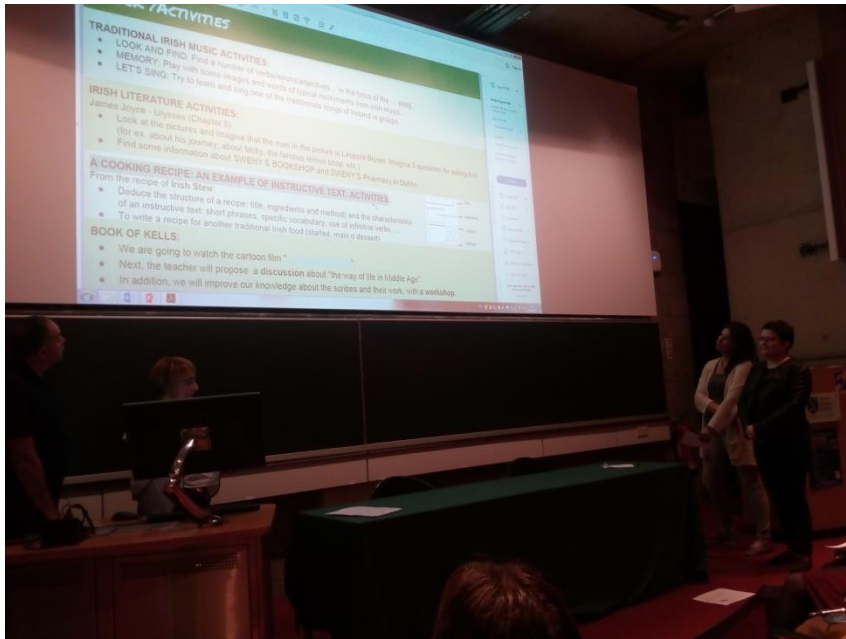

Traditionally, but mistakenly, linked with Brian Boru, high king of Ireland who was killed in 1014 at the Battle of Clontarf (now in the suburbs of Dublin), it probably dates from the later middle ages.

Made from willow and oak, with 29 brass strings (originally 30), its elaborate designs, silver neck mount and embedded crystal suggest that it belonged to a master musician, such as would have played for the noble households of Gaelic Ireland and Scotland.

It was restored and re-stringed in 1961.

Coming to light in Limerick in the eighteenth century, it was presented to Trinity College by William Burton Conyngham (1733-96).
